Comparison of post-operative complications in a group of parturients with HELLP syndrome and a group with a normal pregnancy. The objective of this study was to compare the outcome of pregnancies complicated by HELLP syndrome and uncomplicated pregnancies. We reviewed a series of 27 patients admitted for the delivery of singleton pregnancies in the third trimester with a diagnosis of HELLP syndrome and compared these results with that of 33 patients admitted for the delivery of singleton pregnancies in the third trimester with a normal outcome who constituted our control group. Hypotension of HELLP syndrome group was 56.96% while in the control group it was 72.73%. Massive bleeding occurred in 44.4% of HELLP group and in none of the control group. There was one stillbirth in the HELLP group. In the control group, the risk of rupture of the uterus (RR: 2.82; 95% CI: 0.96-8.2), HELLP syndrome (RR: 2.65; 95% CI: 0.84-8.36) and for the incidence of admission to NICU (RR: 2.25; 95% CI: 0.68-7.42), low birth weight (RR: 3.33; 95% CI: 0.59-17.93) and other antenatal complications was higher in the HELLP group than in the control group. The post-operative complications were similar in both groups. Pregnancy complicated by HELLP syndrome is not associated with a higher risk of post-operative complications compared to a normal pregnancy and the outcome of these pregnancies is similar to that of a normal pregnancy.

Q: Getting Distinct Rows from .NET DataTable Given the following .NET DataTable, I want to get the distinct values of "StringValue" for each row. I am aware that I can obtain the distinct strings via the following linq statement: `var distinctValues = table.AsEnumerable().GroupBy(row => row.Field("StringValue")).Select(group => group.Key).Distinct();` The point is, I need to do this in a query. I'm assuming the following query won't give me the expected results, since it's selecting the first row for each distinct value: `SELECT DISTINCT StringValue FROM Table` Does anyone know if there is a way to achieve the results I need without a predefined select statement (which I don't have access to) and without using temporary tables? A: In this case, you could try below-

DataTable dataTable = new DataTable(); DataColumn stringColumn = new DataColumn("stringvalue");
dataTable.Columns.Add(stringColumn);
dataTable.Rows.Add("a");
dataTable.Rows.Add("b");
dataTable.Rows.Add("b");
dataTable.Rows.Add("a");
dataTable.Rows.Add("a");
var stringCollection = dataTable.AsEnumerable().GroupBy(r => r.Field("stringvalue")).Select(g => new { Value = g.Key }).ToList();
View the result: foreach (var item in stringCollection)
